Paint by Number

In the 1950s, paint by number took the 1950s by storm as a preferred hobby for thousands. While it had many critics, it offered people the ability to pick up a brush and be creative for the first time. The Palmer Paint Company of Detroit, Michigan sold their kits with the tagline, "Every man a Rembrandt." Completed paint by numbers even graced the walls of the Eisenhower White House. Frequent painters improved their ability to mix colors, use brushes, and began to add their own personal touches. The hobby is once again popular for busy people looking for a creative outlet, like you!
