Jell-O

We've all grown up with it, but in the 1930s, Jello-O was fancy fare. American cuisine developed a love for congealed salads. Popular Jell-O recipes often included ingredients like cabbage, celery, green peppers, and even cooked pasta. By the 1950s, "salads" would become so popular that Jell-O responded with savory and vegetable flavors such as celery, Italian, mixed vegetable, and seasoned tomato. Creating a Jell-O dessert required simply boiling water, combining the water with Jell-O, and putting the mixture into popular Tupperware molds and refrigerating for a short time. New flavors were continually added, and unsuccessful flavors were removed. In the 1950s and 1960s, homemakers had apple, black cherry, black raspberry, grape, lemon-lime, mixed fruit, orange-banana, pineapple-grapefruit, blackberry, strawberry-banana, tropical fruit, and more intense "wild" versions of the venerable strawberry, raspberry, and cherry to work with. For your Jell-O mold entry, pick the flavor and add-ins that speak to you.
